2011 Low Income Rates (NHS)

2016 Core Housing Need* (federal census) with locations of agencies serving homeless people

*Core housing need was derived in two stages. The first identified whether the household was living in a dwelling considered unsuitable, inadequate or unaffordable. The second stage established whether the household could be expected to have affordable access to suitable and adequate alternative housing by comparing the household's total income to an income threshold based on local housing costs. Only those households who could not afford alternative housing would be considered in core housing need.
